Japan Chronologists

Naka Muchiyo (late 19th cen) argued with minute detail about the question of Japanese chronology. His ideas were supplemented by those of other Japanese scholars, who pointed out that: (1) the reigns of the earlier Japanese emperors in the Nihon shoki are unnaturally long; (2) the date of the enthronement of the Emperor Jimmu should be reconsidered; (3) a chronological gap links between the Nihon Shoki and contemporary Chinese and Korean chronicles. (The entries about emperors Jing and emperor Ojin can be identified with historical facts relating to the Korea of the 4th & 5th centuries and, must be placed 130 years LATER than mentioned in the Nihon Shoki.
